Engineers land homes contract

Consulting engineers, Upton McGougan have won the contract to work with Atlantic Housing and Kenn Scaddan Architects on an extensive facelift of Eastleigh's Velmore Estate.

The multi million pound project, which is being managed by Atlantic Housing, is due to start next spring and will provide 189 new properties, comprising bungalows, houses and flats, most of which will be "affordable" homes.

The Winchester based Upton McGougan team will manage various aspects of the project, including transport assessments, environmental impact assessments, drainage control and remediation works.

"We are extremely pleased to be working on this fantastic project", said Upton McGougan director, Steve Miles.

Everyone involved wants to ensure that disruption is kept to a minimum so it is planned to concentrate on small parcels of land and transform them one at a time.

The development will be phased over the next two years.
